To whom it may concern.

I have reviewed the below and the real worry is the way new developments are planned. There is very little interest in creating spaces that protect the environment and preserve green areas for the local inhabitants and NOT only people but also wildlife. It looks like there is a desperate need to build build build not thinking about quality. Berkshire is these days an open trash with litter everywhere and building increasing exponentially. I spend hours of my weekends to pick up litter and 90% of it could be recycled.

We MUST protect the British countryside, the green spaces and the wildlife. Development has to take into consideration the above to create spaces that conduce people to live well and engage with the green. Don't destroy the green belt, don't do it. The future generations will regret it badly.

Kind regards
